

Stellenausschreibung Projektingenieur (m/w/d)

Job advertisement Project Engineer (m/f/d)

Lallemand is a global family business with 5,000 employees specializing in the development, production and marketing of yeasts, bacteria and their derivatives. Lallemand provides microbiological solutions for dozens of different industries, from human and animal health and nutrition to bakery, enology, brewing, food ingredients, probiotics and biofuels.

For the location in Vienna Ottakring, we are looking for a Project Engineer (m/f/d) with immediate effect. Are you motivated with a very good technical understanding and do you enjoy working in a production environment? Then this job could be perfect for you!

Your field of activity:

You will be responsible for independent project handling, from planning and ordering to implementation, commissioning and documentation. In doing so, you will be in continuous exchange with the plant management, the electrician as well as the fitter and the production employees. You will report to the project manager with the possibility of taking over the position of project manager in the medium term. There is also the possibility of projects in other Lallemand locations if needed.

Your profile:

- HTL degree or similar with very good technical understanding or corresponding professional experience.
- Good knowledge of process engineering and control technology
- Very good German and good written and spoken English skills
- CAE / CAD knowledge as well as knowledge of the common office software products are desirable.
- Professional experience in project management is desirable.

We offer:

- Flexible working environment
- An interesting position with the possibility of development
- A minimum salary of € 42,000 / gross per year depending on qualifications, an overpayment is possible
- Canteen at the location Vienna Ottakring

Please send your application to: wdieterich@lallemand.com